N.E. cor. 15th and G sts., 4th floor, opp. Treasury. fe2-tf-24 Schools of Alexandria County. All of the schools of Alexandria county opened Monday last except the New Columbia School, just south of Arlington, which was delayed until Monday next, September 19, in order to give time for the placing of school furniture.

Messrs. Joseph E. Supplee, Roswell F. Wright and Dr. Charles B. Munson, the clerks of the different district school boards, were busy the opening day preparing and having executed contracts with the several teachers for the ensuing nine months' school term. James E. Clements, superintendent of schools, visited all the schools that day. delivering the blank forms of monthly re-ports to each teacher. The superintendent made a brief address to teacher and pupils at each school, in which he admonished the scholars to be studious, ambitious and obescholars to be studious, ambitious and obedient, telling them that the present is an era of education; that there seemed to be a friendly rivalry in educational work among the counties, states and even nations, and that he did not want to see the schools of Alexandria county inferior to any others in this great contest.

The superintendent called attention to the fine school houses that had been constructed in Alexandria county and to the new and improved furniture that had been placed therein, and asked the teachers to be watchful over it and warned the pupils not to deface or disfigure it. He said it is the desire of the school trustees of the county, and his own desire, to make the public schools of Alexandria county in every respect among the best in the state or nation.

"What does 'In hoc signe vinces' mean?" asked Mrs. Shortleigh, as she glanced over the paper.
